

It is my understanding that the FCC is considering make changes to the following: You want to loosen up the standards on TV to allow more nudity and foul language during the hours that young children will be watching. I am concerned about this because I have noticed that you are currently allowing a lot of sexual innuendo to permeate the waves during prime time and many times language that we still do not allow in our home.

It is very sad that the FCC has lost all of its credibility for setting standards. TV shows that are very old and that I watched as a child are still as entertaining without the nudity, foul language and sexual suggestiveness. In fact, even in movies it is hard to enjoy them because of the bad language.

I currently avoid almost every show on ABC because they believe that the 4% of our country that are gay should be portrayed in every one of their shows as being the norm for life. I have lived with the hurt of that life style and I don't want to be subjected to it every time I turn on my TV. There are shows on CBS that I have quit watching because they have gone from being funny and suggestive to crossing all the lines and having 75% of the show being about sex. (Two and a Half Men, Two Broke Girls, How I met Your Mother)

Please don't relax any more standards. I am ashamed of us as a country for our lack of moral standards and your organization has been one responsible for holding some of that in control. Don't be swayed to relax any more. You could tighten it up a bit and I know we would enjoy TV more.
